SVGS Website:

Visit our website at http://www.rootsweb.com/wasvgs.>

Do you have a family or personal website you would like to have listed with a link on our website, let us know. If you would like to have a website, our webmaster Dan Royal will be glad to assist you in setting one up.

Have some interesting websites you would like to see linked from our home page, contact Dan.

You can view the most recent issue of this newsletter on line, list the surnames you are interested in researching or volunteer to do look ups for our society.

Society Genealogist:

Diane has been busy these past few months, in Albuquerque, New Mexico, caring for her son, who is now doing much better. We hope to see Diane back with us after the first of the year, and in the meantime, Donna Hinds, Lorraine Rothenbuhler and Hazel Rasar have been assisting with research requests. We have discovered just how much Diane does for others, and how much she is appreciated.

Newsletter:

Laura Kennedy, our newsletter editor, has resigned due to health problems, so we would like to take this opportunity to thank her for her efforts in developing our society newsletter over the past couple of years.

Thank you Laura!!!!!!

Archivist:

Lorraine Rothenbuhler will be working with John Fisher to revamp the Archival Records. The current membership book will be limited to a short biography and a snapshot. The book containing ancestor charts will be combined with the surname list. Have you submitted your biography or updated your surname list? Lorraine is available to answer questions if you are not sure how to do this.

Education:

LaConner Senior Center has expressed an interest in having classes related to Genealogy. Colleen Thulen has volunteered to assist with this program. They have a nice, newly remodeled facility and are open on Wednesdays.

Other options for educational opportunities are being explored by Peggy Green, including workshops beginning at 6 p.m. before general meetings. Laura Sparr will be discussing Ireland at this month's premeeting.

Library:

Want to use our New Check-out policy? If you are a member who would like to check out books but cannot be there on Mondays, make arrangements with one of these people who can check it out for you.

Need to have some general information regarding World War II? The New International Atlas of the World published in 1945 and located in the bottom drawer of the vertical files in the maps section has much useful information. The then 48 states, territories and possessions have short historical summaries and also includescountries of the world. Page 80 has historical maps of significant steps in U.S. history.

Washington State Archives:

The Washington State Archives has listed many records that can be searched at http://www.secstate.wa.gov/archives. There are several depositories around the state which can be searced. Look for the FAQs and GENEALOGY QUESTIONS at the following sites:

http://www.secstate.wa.gov/archives/faq research.aspx>

http://www.secstate.wa.gov/archives/genealogy.aspx

There are two types of records held by the State Archives: state government and local government.

Also of interest: records for Northern State Hospital in Sedro Woolley have been deposited with the Northwest Regional Archives located at WWU in Bellingham. They can be contacted by email for queries: http://www.secstate.wa.gov/archives/archives_northwest.aspx?m=ar1&m=undefined

The Collections at the Northwest Region

Local government records include those from county offices such as the Auditor, the Clerk, the Treasurer, the Board of Commissioners, and from municipalities, school districts, and other service districts. Only a small percentage of the records created by these offices are transferred to the State Archives as archival records. They are selected as archival for their value as legal and historical evidence of policy development, implementation, and effect. The transfer of records to the State Archives is an ongoing process. Some historical records remain with their originating office pending future transfer to the Archives.

Although the Archives does not hold all the records for the entire span of Washington's history from the various county and city offices in the region, it does hold extensive series of some records from all seven counties, with more complete representation in Whatcom, Skagit, and Snohomish counties. These series include:

- Birth and death records from January, 1891 to July, 1907
- Marriage records
- Court records including naturalization records, court dockets, and civil, criminal, and probate case files
- Land records including general indices to recordings, deeds, and patents
- County commissioner's proceedings, ordinances, and resolutions
- Real and personal property tax records
- School district and Educational Service District records including school censuses.

ProQuest Database at Burlington Library

The Gates Foundation Grant has provided several new computers to the Burlington City Library for use by the public in accessing the Internet.

Patrons of the Burlington Library may access the internet on the new computers whether or not they possess a city library card. This is a new feature and can be used by anyone after signing an agreement with the library.

This newest database, specifically designed for libraries by Heritage Quest, is now available online for use at the Burlington Library. We encourage our members to utilize this service of many databases related to genealogy.

Be a Part of 150 Years of Washington's History

By State Archivist Jerry Handfield

In recognition of the March 2, 2003 anniversary of Washington Territory, the Washington State Archives is pursuing two projects to help preserve and disseminate Washington's territorial history throughout the state.

For one project, Archives would like to coordinate volunteers to make the Washington Territorial Censuses available online for a surname index search. Volunteers may work from home to input census data into a database created by the Office of Secretary of State. Passwords, instructions and transcribed copies of the censuses will be provided to those interested.

Also, the Archives is creating a Speaker's Bureau list related to territorial history. The list would consist of people knowledgeable about Washington's Territorial history and be made available to museums, libraries, schools, historical societies, or other organizations that would be interested in hosting a speaker. Our public list of speakers will contain only the name of the speaker, the topic(s), and telephone number or email address.

I encourage anyone who is interested in preserving and passing history onto the next generation to be a part of these important projects. If you are interested in these projects, please send us the following information either electronically or by mail.

Mount Vernon Library offers ProQuest:

The Mount Vernon City Library this week announced remote access to its Pro-Quest online database subscription is now available, via its web page to anyone with a Mount Vernon City Library library card.

To access ProQuest remotely, visit the library's home page on the City of Mount Vernon web site-http://www.ci.mount-vernon.wa.us and click on the ProQuest link on the right side of the page. Customers will be prompted to enter the bar code number from the back of his/her library card. Enter the entire number with no spaces.

The library's EBSCO online database subscription continues to be available via the web page as well. Remote access to EBSCO has been available since the first of the year.

Those without a library card may continue to use the library's subscription databases at the library on its Electronic Resource Centers.

The library is located at 315 Snoqualmie St., Mount Vernon. Reprinted from a local Skagit County newspaper.

Upcoming Programs for 2003:

Vice President John Hayes informs us that we have some very interesting programs planned for the next few months. The Board of Directors would encourage our membership to attend one or all of these programs.

On January 28, those members who brought us their brick walls in May, 2002 will report whether they have had any success in breaking through that wall.

Also, any member who wishes may bring either a brick wall for further discussion by our membership, or a success story to share.

February 25, Margaret Marshall, a local biographer, will speak on "How to Write a Biography". She has spent much of her life doing freelance writing, and has recently been writing biographies. It should be interesting to see how she goes about researching and writing about people she does not know.

March 25, Jerry Handfield, new director of the Washington State Archives, will talk on "What to Save From Grandma's Attic—The Importance of Archives"

We look forward to seeing you there.

States Yank Online Records:

The governor of California recently ordered the state's Department of Health and Human Services to stop selling a database of birth and death records. Gov. Gray Davis wants the department to redo what types of personal information can be released under state public-records laws, according to the San Francisco Chronicle. Concerns about the database recently arose after a state senator learned the database was sold to Rootsweb.com. Officials were worried the information could be used for identity theft or privacy invasion. After the subject was brought up at a state senate hearing, RootsWeb pulled the records from its Website (along with similar databases from two other states) and Gov. Davis halted their sale to private companies.

In a similar move, Texas officials recently decided that birth and death records will remain offline permanently. The state's vital records from 1964 to 1999 had been online after a 1999 law mandated the information be posted, according to the Dallas Morning News. Then, last year, they were temporarily removed from the state Web site because of privacy concerns. Now, Sept. 11—induced fears of identity fraud have prompted the Texas Department of Health to keep vital records public but not quite so easily accessible. The records will still be available to genealogists on microfiche, officials say. -by Susan Wenner, published in the June 2002 issue of Family Tree Magazine.

The Civil War Soldiers and Sailors site is back on-line at http://www.itd.nps.gov.cwss The Bureau of Land Management site for old land records is back on-line. It was taken down by the Department of the Interior some months back. Visit http://www.glorecords.blm.gov>.

New IGI at LDS Website

For some there may be a learning curve, since the new IGI will not be available on compact disk, so patrons will be forced to use the Internet site, whether they want to or not.

There is not going to be retrospective lineage linking of data in the new IGI. Basically, if data gets submitted that is already lineage-linked then it will continue to be lineage linked in the new IGI. There will be additional events shown for some of the entries that are in the old IGI. For example, many christening entries that were extracted from church records also have birth dates and/or burial dates, and, when those dates were captured, they will now be shown.

In the past, you had to go to the parish printout to see those additional facts.

For many, the most exciting change will be the fact that data will now be updated frequently, possibly monthly, instead of every 2 to 3 years, as it was in the past. For a list of additional changes, go to this page: http://www.familysearch.org/Eng/Home/News/home_igi_news.asp

Confusing Time Zones

Before 1883 there were more than 50 time zones in the United States and no standard time. Noon was whenever the sun crossed the meridian overhead. On November 18, 1883 the railroad adopted engineer Stanford Fleming's proposed worldwide system of 24 time zones. Standard time became law on 1918. Closing Date Announcement:

Genealogy Department of the Allen County Public Library, Fort Wayne, Indiana Reprinted with permission from GEN-EVENTS-L-request@rootsweb.com

The Historical Genealogy Department of the Allen County Public Library will close for relocation on Saturday, December 14, 2002 at 6pm. The department will remain closed through the month of January 2003. This is to allow time to move all our materials to our interim location. The current building will be going through renovation and expansion.

Will materials be available?

All our research materials will be available up until Saturday, December 14 at 6pm.At that time the department will be closed so we can move all our materials to our interim location. When the library opens at that location, we will have all our books, microforms and periodicals ready for research.

Why will we be closed?

Closing the department will allow us to move the whole collection at once instead of doing it piecemeal. This will ensure that the materials you are coming to Fort Wayne to use for your research will be available when you arrive, offering the full collection for our researchers. If we moved pockets of materials, what you needed for your research might not be available. By moving the whole collection at once it will ensure that the materials you are interested in will be available until we close on December 14th, and when we reopen in late January 2003.

Where will the interim location be?

The interim location of the Allen County Public Library will be at 200 East Berry St., Fort Wayne, Indiana.Locally, it is called Renaissance Square.It is 5 blocks to the east from the current library. There will be limited free parking available; there is also a pay parking garage across the street and more than 150 metered spaces in close proximity.

What will the interim location be like?

One of the most exciting things about our interim location is that the genealogy collection will be a browsing collection. All the materials will be out and available for the researcher to retrieve them. Materials will not have to be paged; the shelves will be open.

How long will we be in the interim location?

The projected time frame is 2-3 years.

How can I find out more information?

Visiting the library web site http://www.acpl.lib.in.us phoning the department at 260-421-1225 is the best way to get current relocation information.

This is a very exciting time for all of us, librarians and researchers alike. Our goal is to keep our patrons informed and continue to offer the highest level of customer service possible now, in our interim location, and in our newly renovated library.

For further contact, please phone the department (260-421-1225) or email Curt Witcher, Manager, Historical Genealogy Department-ACPL at cwitcher@acpl.lib.in.us or Susan Kaufman Tavenner, Librarian, Historical Genealogy Department-ACPL at skaufman@acpl.lib.in.us

Sincerely,

Curt Witcher, Manager, Historical Genealogy Department Susan Kaufman Tavenner, Librarian, Historical Genealogy Dept

Passports were once used to travel within the States:

Passports are not only documents that are used to travel to one country to another, but in the early days of our country, passports were permits to authorize travel through Indian and foreign-held lands. The southern states east of the Mississippi were for a long time held by the French or Spanish, and by law, only those persons issued passports were allowed to enter these territories.

These passport records have the largest body of data relating to the pioneers in the Southeastern United States. Prior to 1824, the Secretary of War was responsible for the conduct of the Government's relations with Indian tribes and for issuing passports for travel through their land. Passports were supposed to be issued only to those giving assurance of good conduct; it was essential that troublemakers be kept out.

Applicants seeking passports were expected to furnish references of good character. Some persons arriving at the embarking point without the necessary papers were bitter toward Indian agents who tried to detain them until the proper documents were obtained. Some of the reasons passports were necessary were for trade, travel, debt collection, recovery of stolen horses or slaves, and removal of property of white intruders.

By the early 1800s so many people arrived in Louisiana from the American states that the Spanish governor complained about lack of passports.

From 1824 until 1849 passport issuance was transferred to the newly created Department of the Interior. The issuance of passports (or passes) dwindled quickly in the face of rapidly diminishing boundaries. Passports became just a footnote in history, but can still provide valuable information about the movements of individuals of time. From the Odum Family Tree Apr-May 2002, page 22, Section A.

Where did the Soundex system come from?

The Soundex system was invented in the 1930s because the Social Security Administration needed a way to identify people who would be eligible to receive old-age benefits.

Washington Death Index, 1940-64 online at Ancestry.com

Description:

A database for an index to death records for the state of Washington for the years 1940-1964 has been placed online by Ancestry. In addition to providing the name of the deceased, the index also provides the person's age, place and date of death, and sex. For those who died in 1960 or later, the person's place of residence is also given. The index was obtained from the Washington State Archives and was originally created by the Washington State Health Department. More years will be added to this database in the coming months.

Extended Description:

Prior to 1891, Washington had no legislative provision for the recording of births and deaths. However, some counties and cities did record births and deaths prior to 1891. These records have been microfilmed, and copies are available at the Washington State Archives. Between 1891 and 1907, birth and death registers were kept on the county level. The state legislature in 1891 made it the duty of all coroners, physicians, and midwives to report all births and deaths under their supervision. The filing of marriages with county officials has been required by law since the creation of Washington Territory in 1853. Post-1907 vital records in the state office of Vital Records in Olympia are not open to the public for research.

Although not indexed, many birth and death records from 1891 through 1907 have been microfilmed by the Washington State Archives. Given the county of occurrence, the archives staff will search the records for a fee.

The mandatory recording of births and deaths on a state level began 1 July 1907 and marriage and divorce records on 1 January 1968. To obtain post-1907 vital records, specific information is required to initiate a search. For death records, the following is needed: (1) name at time of death, (2) spouse of the deceased, and (3) date and place of death. State records can be obtained by writing: Vital Records, P.O. Box 9709, ET-11, Olympia, Washington 98504-9709.
